

San Antonio Missions National Historical Park Environmental Policy

San Antonio Missions National Historical Park will protect and preserve its natural, cultural, and archeological resources, through wise environmental stewardship. We will continue our role as environmental leaders. Environmental stewardship must be our way of doing business.

San Antonio Missions National Historical Park will conduct its operations and activities in an environmentally and professionally sound manner, effectively and efficiently complying with the letter, spirit, and intent of applicable environmental statutes, regulations, standards, executive orders, and policies. We will accomplish this through pollution prevention and sustainable management practices to maintain environmental integrity and mitigate adverse environmental impacts to the extent possible. These approaches will be used to empower San Antonio Missions National Historical Park and others to become part of our integrated environmental ethic.

Our environmental policy will be communicated to employees, visitors, and others. Managers and other decision-makers will always ask: "Does this decision meet our environmental policy?" The superintendent, management team, supervisors, and employees are responsible for working together to protect the park's environment. The superintendent is accountable for leading environmental management processes and finding funding and resources. The Compliance Improvement Management System Team is responsible for analyzing environmental issues, setting objectives and targets, managing projects, and asking for assistance. San Antonio Missions National Historical Park will strive for continual improvement in our environmental performance. Environmental protection is everyone's responsibility.
